Radha –

This looks fine. Thanks for preparing.

It probably makes sense to start figuring out dates for the depositions. We'll try to get potential dates for our experts and hopefully you can do the same and then we can talk next week about scheduling. Okay?

The second option works – see attached, which incorporates that schedule.

EXTERNAL SENDER

Chris,

We are fine with extending the dispositive motion deadline as well and generally agree with your approach, but the exact dates are problematic because of holiday/school vacation schedules. Two alternatives that work for us:

SJ deadline December 16 (the same 10-day extension as the expert cutoff); Opp., January 13; Reply, January 27.

SJ deadline December 20; Opp. Jan 20; Reply Feb 3.

Does one of these options work for your team?

-Bridget

Bridget –

We think the 8th gives us enough time and we are concerned about pushing that deadline without moving the deadline for filing dispositive motions. So, we are willing to work with you in an effort to compromise on this, but there would have to be a corresponding extension of the dispositive motion deadline. We could then agree on a reasonable briefing schedule to accommodate the holidays. E.g., December 20; Opp., January 13; Reply, January 27.

EXTERNAL SENDER

Chris,

In drafting the case management statement, we've been giving thought to the remaining case deadlines. Based on the number of likely expert depositions, date of the mediation, and some scheduling issues, it's not realistic to complete expert depositions by Nov. 8. We propose extending that deadline to November 18, 2019. We could flag the issue in the CMS and file a stip before the case management conference.

In our view, the expert cutoff could be extended without affecting the remaining deadlines.

Do you agree?

Best,
Bridget
